Teresa Tinsley: Closing the gap or closing the door? Will the latest language education policies fulfil Michael Gove's goals for social mobility?

Michael Gove sees education reform as a 'progressive cause' and wants schools to be 'engines of social mobility', but to what extent will the E-Bacc and the new national curriculum make language learning more equitable? I will analyse the extent to which languages has become the preserve of the more privileged and assess whether recent policy initiatives will close the gap or make it wider.
