Call for survey respondents: Perceptions of Primary Languages in England

As part of the Progression in Primary Languages project (Institute of Education, University of Reading), we have launched a survey which aims to explore views on the KS2 Languages Programme of Study, approaches to assessment of primary languages, and beliefs about language teaching at this level (age 7 to 11). We are also keen to understand how the primary languages curriculum is currently being implemented in England's schools.

Teachers: We are keen to hear from anyone who is currently involved in languages teaching in a primary school in England, regardless of whether you consider yourself to be a languages specialist or not. Teacher survey link: <https://reading.onlinesurveys.ac.uk/perceptions-primary-languages-teacher>

Teacher educators: We are keen to hear from any teacher educators from both university- and school-based ITT programmes, who are involved in training new teachers to teach languages in primary schools, regardless of whether you teach on a general primary education programme or on a programme with a languages specialism. Teacher educator survey link: <https://reading.onlinesurveys.ac.uk/perceptions-primary-languages-teacher-educator>
